

WHAT'S SO IMMORAL ABOUT A FREE MARKET?

A Lecture

6:00 - 8:00 PM • Thursday, November 3, 2016

Linfield 125, Montana State University, Bozeman, MT 59717

Is the world getting better or are we spiraling ever downward in a race to the bottom? Is capitalism a zero sum game? Are the rich getting richer at the expense of the poor?

Rancher, author, and professor P.J. Hill will explore different economic systems, examining the opportunities, limits, and moral implications of different forms of governance.

P.J. Hill

Professor Emeritus of Economics at Wheaton College in Wheaton, Illinois and a senior fellow at PERC, the Property and Environment Research Center

P. J. Hill has authored and edited numerous books and articles on the theory of property rights, institutional change, and environmental economics. His undergraduate degree is from Montana State University and his PhD is from the University of Chicago. P.J. grew up on a cattle ranch in eastern Montana, which he operated with his family until 1992. He then bought a smaller ranch in western Montana that he operated until 2012.

Questions? Contact Holly Fretwell for more info at hfretwell@montana.edu

sponsored by

